- 4.3. A variable remuneration fund is formed only after assessing the Bank's performance, taking into account current and future risks, costs of the capital employed and liquidity support needs. The variable remuneration fund and its size must not limit the ability of the Group to strengthen its capital base. Where the persons performing risk management and compliance control functions of the Bank are in doubt as to the effect on employee's behaviour and operational risk exposure, they provide input within their respective competences during the setting-up of variable remuneration budgets, establishing performance criteria and awarding variable remuneration.
- 4.4. Variable remuneration is paid to link the individual performance targets of employees to the long-term interests of the Group to ensure sustainable business development and to encourage employees to act in and respectful, honest, transparent and professional manner, respecting the rights and interests of customers.
- 4.5. The amount of variable remuneration is based on the overall assessment of the achievement of pre-defined targets and the performance of the employee, the unit, and the Group. The variable remuneration awarded to an employee may depend on the job position of the employee, the importance of his/her decisions that may have a significant effect on the risk taken by the Group. The assessment of an employee's individual annual performance targets and achievements includes not only his/her personal financial performance, but also his/her non-financial/non-quantitative input (e.g., compliance with the Code of Ethics, values of the Bank, relations with customers/colleagues, compliance with standards, implementation of the requirements set out in internal documents, initiative, leadership/engagement in project activity, performance improvement, etc.). The annual variable remuneration of Nominated Employees is awarded only after annual performance review, based on the results of the performance review for the most recent year, as set out in sub-paragraph 4.15.4 of the Policy.
- 4.6. The variable remuneration of employees engaged in risk management, compliance and internal audit functions is awarded for the works performed and the results related to the performance of their assigned functions; the performance of the units under their control is not taken into account. For Nominated Employees performing risk management, compliance and internal audit functions, variable remuneration is linked to the overall performance of the Group as set out in paragraph 4.11 of the Policy.

Group Companies, with due regard to the applicable special regulatory requirements, designate the nominated employees of a specific Group Company as well as the principles of variable remuneration applicable to such persons. Such nominated employees are not considered to be the Nominated Employees.

- 4.8. Variable remuneration may be awarded to Nominated Employees, by maintaining adequate balance between the variable and the fixed remuneration components, and by preserving the ability to pursue a flexible policy related to the variable remuneration components, i.e., the variable remuneration awarded for one (1) calendar year must not be more than 100 per cent of the fixed remuneration component in the same one (1) calendar year for which the variable remuneration is awarded (i.e. the ratio of variable to fixed remuneration may not exceed 100%), in order to promote sound and effective risk management, except where the General Meeting of Shareholders of the Bank increases the maximum ratio between variable and fixed remuneration to 200 per cent in accordance with the requirements of the law. The actual ratio between variable and fixed remuneration in the Group is calculated by adding up all components of the variable remuneration awarded to the Nominated Employee over a certain period and dividing their sum by the amount of the components of fixed remuneration awarded during the same period.
- 4.9. For the purpose of calculating the ratio of variable to fixed components of remuneration for a Nominated Employee, the variable component of remuneration is the amount of severance pay in excess of the severance pay levels established by applicable law or by the decisions of public authorities (courts, etc.).
- 4.10. The annual variable remuneration, including the deferred portion thereof, may be awarded, paid and/or granted only provided the financial position of the Bank/Group is sustainable, upon application of ex ante and post ante measures for adjusting variable annual remuneration by risk category (where applicable) and without prejudice to the requirements of other laws. The Bank's assessment of current and potential future risks, including ESG risk, arising from, or directly related to, the payment of annual variable remuneration is based on the Bank's assessment of quantitative and qualitative criteria. Quantitative criteria are the Bank's capital and liquidity ratios, and qualitative criteria are the Bank's business continuity risk management indicators. Annual variable remuneration must be reduced or not paid at all upon motion of the Bank's management/supervisory bodies/Remuneration Committee, if the performance of the Bank/Group fails to meet the indicators set out in the strategy, or where losses are recorded, where the Nominated Employee has acted in bad faith or where his/her actions resulted in a loss to the Bank or the Group.
- 4.11. The amount of the annual variable remuneration for Nominated Employees shall be determined taking into account the results of the assessment of the Bank's/Group's objectives, the results of the assessment of the achievement of the Group's corporate/departmental/personal objectives by the Nominated Employee and the weight assigned to these objectives, the coefficients of the annual variable remuneration approved by the respective body of the Bank, and possible adjustments to the calculated coefficient, which may also be influenced by the employee's non-financial/non-quantitative contribution. Annual variable remuneration is linked to the risk taken by the unit/employee and the performance of the Group/Group company and the unit/employee. The criteria for calculating annual variable remuneration and target ratios are affected by the job position and responsibility, the effect on operating performance as well as the existing and future risks. The relative weighting of the performance criteria of each level (group of posts) is established by the respective body of the Bank that sets the exact proportions/weightings of the targets. In calculating the annual variable remuneration for:
